CENTREVILLE

The recent rainy and cold weather replacing last week's heat has caused much sickness.

The show on Thursday was a decided success in every respect. The day was ideal. The crowd was exceptionally large and the exhibits, sports and races were the best ever held here. The concert hall in the evening proved a fine treat.

A number from here attended Kingston fair.

Bernard Ingoldsby and Frank Teal motored from North Tonawanda, N. Y., last week and visited relatives here.

A wee baby girl arrived last week at Joseph Cavanaugh's.

James B. Weese is resigning the mail route. Many tenders are in for the position.

T. E. McGill and family met with an auto accident coming from the show in Kingston on Thursday night. His car was quite badly broken.

James Hinch, Camden East, spent the week-end at Chas. Ingoldsby's.

Pure boiled linseed oil and genuine white lead always in stock at WILSON'S Hardware.

ODESSA.

Mrs. John McDermott and son, Watertown, N. Y., are visiting relatives.

Mrs. Edward Turney spent a few days at her home last week.

Nelson Kilgannon has returned from visiting relatives in Watertown, N. Y.

Mrs. Geo. Watts returned Saturday from spending a few days with her daughter, Mrs. George Ettinger, Kingston.

Miss Rosland McLaren, who has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Elwell Emmons, returned to her home in Toronto last Tuesday.

William Jenkins has purchased a new residence on Albert street, Kingston, and contemplates moving in the near future.

Mrs. Willett and family left last Friday to make their home in Oshawa, where Mr. Willett has been employed for several months They have been residents of the village for the past year, and will be greatly missed.

Special demonstration of kitchen cabinets during October at Gibbards.

CENTREVILLE.

The county stone crusher has started to work on the county road through here, which is badly in need of repair.

Several here were disappointed in not being able to attend the Kingston Fair last week owing to the rainy weather.

Potatoes and apples are a bumper crop and are occupying the attention of most farmers at present.

Mr. John Fitzgerald and family, of Eldorado, spent a couple of days with friends here the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. McGregor, of Myers' Cave, and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Menor, of Violet, were over Sunday visitors at E. H. Perry's.

Owing to the Croydon cheese factory being closed for repairs, quite an amount of extra milk is now being received at the factory here.

Washing machines and wringers in all styles and prices at WILSON'S Hardware.

IT TOUCHES CANADIAN CITIZENSHIP

The fact that thousands of 'teen age young people, especially the boys, leave the church and Sunday School, presents a problem that is calling forth the concern of christian organizations everywhere. Statistics show that only one in every three of the Protestant population is enrolled in the Sunday Schools, and that 85 per cent. of those who unite with the church are from the Sunday School. It is an astounding fact that the other two-thirds of Canada's Protestant population provide only 15 per cent. of our church membership.

To turn the outflow of 'teen age young people into church channels, is the great work of to-day, and that the denominations are concerned about it and are taking action is shown by the fact that practically all of them, together with the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A., are combining to promote religious education among boys and girls. This is being done in Ontario under the supervision and with the leadership of the Ontario Religious Education Council, previously known as the Ontario Sunday School Association. The handling of this big proposition is recognized as not being solely a matter touching the church, but bearing directly on promoting a wholesome type of Canadian citizenship, keeping the future of Canada well in view, for no nation is greater than the character of its citizens.

Two large conventions have been planned by the Ontario Religious Education Council for this year: one in Belleville from October 26th to 28th, and one in St. Catherines from November 2nd to 4th. Speakers of international note will be in attendance, and altogether the program is one that commends itself to all Sunday School enthusiasts. The outstanding speaker is Dr. M. A. Henline, one of America's most forceful platform men, and a man exceptionally qualified to discuss the subjects of religious education in its many phases. Already indications point to a record-breaking attendance at both conventions.

HAZARDS OF GASOLINE IN THE HOME.

WARNING TO MOTHERS.

"Put two gallons of gasoline and two ounces of soap in a wash boiler or large dishpan and do your dry cleaning at home" is the deadly advice of the manufacturers of a gasoline soap.

"Put three quarts of gasoline in a deep pail with a heaping teaspoonful of borax. Put mop in and soak over night. In the morning wash mop in gasoline until clean, then rinse in one quart of clean gasoline, let dry" is the equally dangerous advice of another on cleaning mops.

"Dissolve a bar of good white soap in a quart of hot water, add one pint of gasoline and one tablespoonful of ammonia. Mix thoroughly. Scrub small area of rug with stiff brush dipped in this paste, Scrape up lather with a broad putty knife and wipe with damp cloth" is the vicious advice of a third on rug cleaning at home.

Those three and such as these, are short and sure methods to join the heavenly choir. Order the doctor, nurse, coroner, undertaker, and fire department in advance.

Cleaning stoves or fabrics in gasoline indoors, or spraying bedroom furniture with gasoline to exterminate vermin are equally dangerous practices. During all three operations the gasoline constantly evaporates and the fumes mix with the air. Being nearly three times heavier than the air, they flow along the floor like a stream of water lodging in the low places, perhaps fifty feet away from their source. The explosive force of this mixture is fourteen times greater than dynamite. The tiny drop of gasoline evaporated and exploded by an electric spark from a horse shoe or an iron tool, a match, an open light, grate, stove or furnace, will explode this death-dealing mixture.

You cannot see this creeping foe on the floor, nor foresee the spark that may set it off to destroy life and property. YOUR ONLY SAFEGUARD IS NOT TO USE GASOLINE INDOORS AT ALL, and to store what gasoline you have in an evaporation-proof container. Can should be painted vermillion red and plainly marked "Gasoline." No other oil should be stored in a red can.

The safety of the home and family is largely in the mother's keeping. She cannot afford to endanger the home herself by engaging in highly dangerous practices, such as these.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING

Council Chamber,
October 4th, 1920.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor Robinson presiding.

Members present—Reeve Graham and Councillors Boyes, Paul, Ming and MacGregor.

The minutes of the last regular session were read and on motion were confirmed.

A communication was received from F. W. Barrett, Chief of Police, asking for fourteen days' leave of absence, dating from November 3rd next. On motion the communication was left in the hands of the Police Committee, with power to act.

Mr. Geo. A. Cliff, Assessor, has completed the assessment and handed the Roll to the Clerk. The assessment of the town this year amounts to $1,841,547.00, an increase over last year of $102,547.00.

Reeve Graham reported that Mr. Noonan, Government Engneer on the Provincial Highway, had offered the town the loan of the engine and scarifier and heavy grader, also man to operate same, to level Dundas street. The town's portion of the work would be to roll the road down after it is levelled. The cost to the town would be small, perhaps $100.00, to do the work from the G. T. R. bridge to the western limits. The Council know that the road is in a bad and unsafe condition and feel that something should be done this fall, and intend to go ahead with the work as outlined above.

On motion the walk from the Selby road railway crossing north was ordered to be repaired with cinders.

A request that the walk on Richard street, from Water street to Light's mill, be repaired, and that a culvert near Chester Snider's in Clarksville, be cleaned out, was referred to the Streets Committee, with power to act.

Councillor Boyes, chairman of the Finance Committee, was asked to report at next meeting re insurance on bathing houses.

STELLA

Quite a number from here attended the Kingston fair last week. The attendance would have been greater, but for the rainy weather.

Silo filling is about completed here.

There is still considerable threshing to be done.

Many potatoes have been lifted and they are reported to be a good crop throughout the township.

Apples are not very plentiful, and the heavy winds of the past few days have blown a lot of them off the trees.

Canon J. W. Jones, Kingston, preached the thanksgiving service in St. Alban's church on Sunday evening, Sept. 26th

Rev. Jas. Cumberland, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian church for many years, has retired and removed with his wife and son to Kingston. Mr. Cumberland will be greatly missed by his many friends, not only in the congregation, but throughout the township. Rev. T. F. McCree, Kingston, is taking the services for the next two Sundays.

Mrs. J. B. Gibson's house on the back shore was struck by lightning last Monday, but no damage was done.

F. Richards, living on the front road had two valuable horses and a colt killed.

Mrs. (Capt.) Jos. Sanders, and Mrs. R. P. Sanders, have taken a trip with Capt. T. H. Sanders, of the steamer H. H. Brown, to the head of the lakes.

The funeral of the late Thomas Beggs, Emerald, was held to Glenwood vault on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sanders, of Deseronto, spent a few days here last week with friends.

TO THE NAPANEE EXPRESS

Dear Sir:—Kindly allow me to suggest that there never was a time, and there never may be again, for all sections of religious thought, be they Protestant, Catholic, or otherwise, to join together in real brotherhood, and so set an example to the nations, and blaze the path that leads to perpetual peace. This idea should strike the gong of public opinion in the right place, for surely it must be apparent to all well-wishers of our race that without universal brotherhood the curse of war, with all its hellishness, will never be obliterated from our world.

Humbly submitted by

WILSON MAKES APPEAL.

Wants Americans to Ratify Peace Treaty.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5. — In a statement issued from the White House Sunday night and understood to have been written by his own hand, President Wilson made personal appeal to the country on behalf of the League of Nations, which he describes as the "most momentous issue that has ever been presented to the people of the United States."

In the statement, the President tells the people of the country that they have been "grossly misled with regard to the treaty, and particularly with regard to the proposed character of the League of Nations, by those who have assumed the serious responsibility of opposing it."

He brands as "absolutely false" the statement that Article Ten of the Covenant will "make it possible for others nations to lead us into war whether we willed it or not," and insists that the article nowhere interferes or impairs the right of Congress to declare war according to its own independent judgment.

"The chief question," says the President to the voters, is: "Do you want your country's honor vindicated and the treaty of Versailles ratified?"

Arrested German Prince.

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—Prince Gottfried Hohenlohe-Langenburg, with other officers, has been arrested, according to the newspapers, on a charge of attempting to secure possession of 2,000,000 rifles left behind in Holland during the retreat of the German army, with a view to selling them unlawfully.

The prisoners were provisionally released after a preliminary examination by the public prosecutor.

Prince Hohenlohe-Langenburg last April was fined 10,000 marks for his connection with the attack on members of the French mission in the hotel Adlon early in the year. This attack was led by Prince Joachim of Hohenzollern, a cousin of former Emperor William.

Wants Trade With Canada.

OTTAWA, Oct. 5.—Writing from Belfast to the Weekly Bulletin of the Department of Trade and Commerce, Trade Commissioner J. Vernon McKenzie states that there is keen interest in Canadian goods in all parts of Ireland, and a definite desire that direct trading relations may be established. There is a demand for Canadian cheese, timber and wood products of all kinds. Agricultural implements and garden tools have found a ready market. Belfast timber importers are interested in getting supplies from British Columbia at a reasonable price. He notes that the Germans are already sending small shipments to the Irish markets.

WARNING GERMAN REDS

German Radical Has Denounced Bolshevism.

He Tells His Fellow-countrymen That It Would Be a Mistake to Permit Russian Leaders to Make Use of Them, and Says "Keep Our Business In Our Own Hands."

BERLIN, Oct. 5. — George Ledebour, leader of the revolutionary Socialists, for more than half a century, has just given the Moscow autocrats one of the worst tannings the Bolshevik dictators have received up to date. In doing so, Ledebour accentuates the feud between those who are for and those who are against accepting Moscow's ultimatum, under which an Independent Socialist party will be graciously permitted to join the third internationale. Appealing, in the Freheit, to the party leaders and delegates to the Halle Congress on Oct. 12 to stand firmly and unconditionally against submitting to Moscow's dictatorship, Ledebour writes: "I have already pointed out the danger threatening our and the whole proletarian, revolutionary movement if dictatorial powers are conferred on an international central organization. My proofs are strengthened by the things we are now experiencing.

"The Moscow international central committee is already working under high pressure through its tools in Germany to inflame the German workers to acts and measures which must inevitably get into a war against France and the Entente. For example, at a mass meeting in Dortmund a Communist named Leutner urged, with flaming words, that the workers should not only prevent war material and troops from being transported from non-neutral countries to Poland, as we also demand, but that trains should be held up to whose transit the Entente is formally entitled, to fit up the troops of occupation in the east.

"If we were to give way to these activities of the Communists, which drive and agitate toward war, the French at last would have the pretext they desire to occupy the Ruhr district. Nor would effective defence be possible, or even an agreement with the Communists at the helm. Before the French and British workers, among whom revolutionary inclinations are very weakly developed, would 'get busy' Germany would have been over-run and plunged into fresh war and misery.

"When one looks through Moscow's spectacles one can with a light heart impose such a sacrifice on Germany and, to begin with, on German workmen. But for us it would be a policy of criminal madness.

"It is imperative that we oppose every attempt to place a decision of such questions in the hands of the international central committee in Moscow. The German proletariat must not be used as cannon fodder for Lenine's, Trotzky's and Radek's plans.

"Let us keep our own business in our own hands."

WILL HAVE THEIR BEER.

Germans Refuse to Buy Weak Substitute.

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—There is good news for tourists, as well as for natives. "Full beer again" and "Peace time beer again" signs are blossoming throughout Berlin, indicating that the old eight per cent. is now on tap after the Government removed the restrictions on brewers which resulted virtually in a boycott by the German people, who refused to pay the high prices for weak beer.

Beer sales decreased so in the past few months that many breweries were facing bankruptcy or the choice of brewing stronger, saleable beer. To forestall wholesale unemployment the Government let down the bars. The Hotel Proprietors' Association has voted to discontinue the practice of charging a surtax, ranging from 100 per cent. up on hotel bills to foreign guests, whose home money stands high.

Africans Lived Like Moderns.

PARIS, Oct. 5.—That society life of the days of the African emperors closely resembled the social life of the present has been revealed by a magnificent specimen of mosaic uncovered by archaeologists in the ruins of Carthage, according to an announcement by the Academy of Science. The mosaic, which is the largest and most beautiful in existence, pictures the life of a Cathaginian nobleman's country house. It portrays the well-kept grounds, the splendid villa, the stables, and "garages" for chariots, resembling very much the modern automobile garage. The tableau shows members of the Carthaginian "400" playing a game which, apparently, is the original of baseball.

Burned by Oil Explosion.

KITCHENER, Oct. 5. — Mrs. A Schwartz, of Breslau, sustained injuries which proved fatal by being severely burned while pouring coal oil over a wood fire at her home on Saturday. The oil caused an explosion wihch blew out the bottom of the can, and the woman's clothing took fire and was literally burned off her body. Her one-year-old child was also severely burned, and the father had his arm badly injured in extinguishing the burning clothing. The mother and child were removed to the Kitchener and Waterloo Hospital. Mrs. Schwartz succumbed to her burns at an early hour Sunday morning, and little hope is held out for the recovery of the child. The timely arrival of Mr. Schwartz, who conducts the Breslau Hotel, saved the destruction of the building.

Dr. Hastings, M.O.H. of Toronto, was in a bad shipwreck on the Pacific coast.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflamation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Circulars free. All Druggists, 75c.

EVADERS IN TROUBLE

Government Will Check Up the Tax Returns.

In Many of the Cities Throughout Canada Auditors Are at Work Checking Up Books of Business Men Suspected of Misreporting Incomes — Larger Demands Will Probably Be Made In Future.

OTTAWA, Oct. 5.—Recent prosecutions in Ottawa, Hamilton and other places of persons charged with making incorrect returns of income for the purpose of Federal taxation are the outcome of a Dominion-wide effort to unlock the pockets of the tax evaders. In the first years in which the Dominion tax was imposed upon incomes, it was discovered that a large number of persons had failed to make the returns required under the law.

This year, it is said, returns have been made pretty generally, but in a considerable number of cases they have understated the incomes of the taxpayers. The Taxation Branch of the Finance Department, consequently, has employed auditors in various parts of the country to examine the books of business and professional men suspected of incorrectly reporting their incomes. In a number of cases prosecutions have resulted from these investigations, and fines, some as large as $1,000, have been imposed for one offence.

The fines levied go into the Dominion treasury and help to meet the cost of maintaining the Taxation Branch.

Higher rates of taxation upon large incomes and the steps being taken to ensure payment by all who are liable to taxation are expected materially to increase the country's revenue from income taxation.

Special auditors are also being employed in various sections of the country to work in conjunction with Inland Revenue officers for the purpose of checking returns of collections of luxury and sales taxes.

Source of False Hair.

Women who wear false hair do not realize how likely it is that their "added extra" tresses are derived from the heads, usually unclean, of Chinese people.

Last year we imported more than 400,000 pounds of human hair from Hong Kong. It is cheap stuff in China, being valued at less than $2 a pound, wholesale.

This is reckoned a high price, increased demand by the United States having caused an advance in the market. We paid last year $228,395 for Chinese human hair f.o.b. at Hong Kong.

At that rate its original cost was a bit more than $2 a pound; but we get the choice stuff, the longer and finer grade. Europe buys the shorter and coarser hair, largely for industrial purposes.

Special grades, extra fine, are made into hair nets, which most women on this continent wear in these days. The automobile has made small hats fashionable, and on this account the hair is worn compact; also in order that it may not blow about when the motorcar is speeding.

It is comforting to know that the human hair imported from China undergoes very elaborate cleaning processes before it is offered for sale in this country. Still, on the whole, one might wish that it came from somewhere else.

Reason for Tears.

The boy came into the house weeping and his mother was naturally solicitous. "What's the matter, Willie?" she asked. "The boy across the way hit me," he replied. "Oh, well, I wouldn't cry for that," she returned. "Show him that you can be a little man." "I aint' crying for that," he retorted. "He ran into the house before I could get at him."

Tries to End His Life.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 5. — It became known to-day that Abdul Mejid, heir apparent to the Turkish throne, attempted to commit suicide Thursday night by trying to swallow poison. A man-servant dashed the bottle to the floor before its contents reached his lips. The heir apparent is said to have been nervous from his enforced seclusion. The attempt at suicide is believed to have been due to despair over his country's future.

Swallowed His Teeth.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—Surgeons at the King Edward VII. Hospital at Windsor have made a remarkable recovery of a plate of false teeth swallowed by a man. They inserted a tube, and after skilfully "fishing" for nearly an hour, they secured the teeth by fine wire clips and drew them through he throat.

Canada's navy is to be commissioned November 1, and leave England for Canada soon after.

NUMEROUS CANDIDATES.

Many Surprises In New Brunswick Elections.

FREDERICTON, N.B., Oct. 5.—One hundred and eight candidates have been nominated in New Brunswick for the eighth Provincial Legislature, according to official and unofficial reports received here.

There are 48 seats in the Legislature, divided between 17 constituencies, and 37 members of the last Legislature are included amongst the candidates nominated.

Never in the history of the province has there been such a mix-up of parties and candidates as the present election has produced, there being candidates in the field representing the Government, Opposition, United Farmers, Labor, Returned Soldiers, several forms of independents, and some who represent combinations of parties.

In but one county—Madawaska—has there been an election by acclamation, while in only four constituencies is there to be a straight party fight between Government and Opposition parties. The Government's candidates were elected by acclamation in Madawaska, but this advantage was balanced by the Government party failing to nominate complete tickets in Carleton and King's counties, where, instead of three, they nominated only two candidates in each.

There are straight fights between Government and Opposition in St. John City and County, in Albert and Gloucester Counties. In Victoria, Sunbury and Kent Counties there are straight fights between the Government and United Farmers, and there are three-cornered fights in King's, Queen's and York counties, Moncton City and Restigouche County, there being two Liberal tickets, both supporting the Government, in Restigouche county, where Hon. C. H. Lebillo, a member of former Liberal Governments, has entered the field with W. D. Duncan, of Campbellton, as his colleague, claiming the Government convention to have been "packed."

There are mixed combinations in the field in Charlotte, where the Farmers and Opposition have united; Westmoreland, where Farmers and Labor have united; Northumberland, where Independent Liberals, Conservatives, Labor and United Farmers have combined in a ticket opposing the Government candidates, and Carleton, where a United Farmers' ticket, an Independent, and a Returned Soldier candidate are running.

RUSSIAN IS ARRESTED.

First Clue In Wall Street Bomb Outrage.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Renewed vigor was instilled Monday in the investigation of the origin of the mysterious Wall Street explosion on September 16, as a result of the arrest at Pittsburg of Florean Zelenaka, Department of Justice agents said they attached special significance to the arrest.

Immediately the Government investigators learned of the man's arrest in Pittsburg, where a suit case filled with dynamite was found in his room, they started an investigation at the Brooklyn address he gave when arrested; and, early Monday their search of a room he occupied led to the discovery of the following facts which they considered important:

That Zelenaka left his little room at 470 Cleveland street in the heart of the foreign section, an hour or more before the disaster occurred;

That when he left he was carrying a reddish-yellow bag;

That he had once been employed by the Hercules Powder Company;

That he left in his room a large quantity of Russian literature, said to be of a radical nature.

The Government agents went to the Cleveland street address just before midnight, under the leadership of Special Agent Callahan. They aroused Michael Terkasky, a sailor, who said he had rented a room to Zelenaka.

Terkasky furnished much valuable information concerning Zelenaka, the agents said.

Search through a foreign-made trunk, left by the roomer, revealed a mass of radical literature, the discovery that he had been employed, about two years ago, by the Hercules Powder Co., that he possessed a Russian passport, issued in 1918, and other information which was not made public.

MAY ALTER RATES.

Cabinet Expected to Take Action This Week.

OTTAWA, Oct. 5.—It is anticipated that the Cabinet will come to a decision regarding the railway rates appeal before the end of the week. It is intimated that there will be a reference back to the board and that this reference, while not calling for a reversal of the judgment, or a suspension of the rates, will contain certain recommendations.

It is said, for instance, that the board will be asked to instruct the railways to file new schedules eliminating the discrimination of from 15 to 18 per cent. which the chief commissioner has declared exists as between east and west and that the board will be advised to revise its order, accordingly, after the New Year. In the meantime the railways will enjoy the revenue from the crop movement up to that time, under the existing rates.

It is further hinted that the board be asked to revise the horizontal increases granted by making certain specific reductions in the rates on commodities of heavy bulk and low value.

Six vacancies in the Senate are expected to be filled shortly. The vacancies are divided among the provinces as follows: Ontario, two; British Columbia, one; Alberta, one; Saskatchewan, one; Nova Scotia, one.

Published Denial.

DUBLIN, Oct. 5. — Dublin Castle has issued an official denial of the charges made recently by Arthur Griffith, founder of the Sinn Fein, that the Government itself was responsible for reprisals in Ireland, and that a certain number of Sinn Fein leaders, including himself, were marked for assassination.

"No such policy, either in whole or in part, has been formulated by his Majesty's executive in Ireland; no such policy has been considered," says the denial. The statements are untrue in all respects."

CATTLE MARKETS

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Oct. 5.—With around 2,900 fresh cattle on sale yesterday, the quality of which was generally common, there was a very fair demand for good butchers, and heavy finished steers. All other grades were slow and the market ½c lower. Milch cows and springers were wanted, and sold at satisfactory prices, but the common ones were hard to sell.

There was a steady demand for heavy feeding steers at the lower prices.

Prospects are generally steady for good fat catle, and lower for medium and common grades.

In the early stages of the market there was a good deal of misconception as to the actual condition in the West regarding the alleged cut in prices and the numbers arriving. While the markets in Winnipeg, as elsewhere, show an easier trend, there was no sensational drop in prices, and the local trade in Toronto, while slow on the common stuff, held fairly steady in the good cattle.

Natives Own Automobiles.

LONDON, Oct. 5. — With a big cocoa boom on, untold wealth is being won by the natives of the Gold Coast, West Africa. More than 200 of them now run their own automobiles and another 200 are impatiently awaiting delivery of theirs. European style houses, costing, in some instances, as much as $50,000, have been built by the most prosperous.

During the war astute negroes bought cocoa at $50 a ton, and after the armistice they were able to sell at $300. More than a hundred native shippers flourish in such towns as Secocondee and Accra. Even native women are bitten with the "get-rich-quick" craze, several having set up as brokers.

Breaking Down Caste.

When a Brahmin will violate the laws of caste to the extent of going into the fields and putting his hands to a plough it means that a great light must have dawned in his consciousness. And that is what has happened in India. Returned Brahmin soldiers who, at the front, became inoculated with western ideas, are beginning to release liberalizing influences. At Midnapore, India, one hundred and fifteen Brahmins held a mass meeting where several fervid addresses were made on the agricultural needs of the country. The dignity of farming as a calling was emphasized. After the addresses the meeting by unanimous decision adjourned to the field, and there the high and mighty Brahmins, for whom ploughing had become taboo, took hold of plough handles and had their first practical lessons in agriculture.—World Outlook.

"I wish I had one of those fellows here who are trying all the time to get into communication with Mars."

"Why?"

"I could use him right now. He'd be just the man to try to get the four telephone numbers I've got to call."

Earl a Commercial Traveler.

In England it is again becoming the fashion for society people to go into business. Lord Carnwath, a Scottish earl of ancient pedigree, is a commercial traveler. A son of the Duke of Montrose has joined a ship-building firm in Glasgow, while a son of the Marquis of Ailsa runs an automobile repair shop in London.

GRAVES 10,000 FEET HIGH.

Some Famous Men Have Strange Resting Places.

The body of Sir Star Jameson, the leader of the famous "raid," is shortly to be interred on the Matoppo Hills, in Matabeleland, alongside the grave of his old friend and colleague, Cecil Rhodes, says Pearson's Weekly.

Amid these remote fastnesses, far from human habitation, will rest side by side for all time the two "Makers of South Africa," the twin graves marked by a huge pillar of unchiselled native granite chosen by Rhodes during his life-time.

Similar hill-top interments are not altogether uncommon. Robert Louis Stevenson, the novelist, for instance, is buried on the summit of the highest mountain in his beloved Samoa, whither he was carried by the natives, who adored him.

Probably the loftiest grave in the world is that wherein reposes the body of Wilson Everitt, the famous mountaineer, who on his death expressed a wish to be buried as near as possible to the summit of Orizaba, the lofty Andean peak which he had been the first to scale. His desire was duly carried out, the grave being blasted with dynamite out of the living rock high above the snow line.

So long ago as 1766, a Mr. Hall built the tower which stands to this day on Leith Hill, the highest point in Surrey; and underneath the edifice he was duly interred, according to his wish, when he died, six years later. On top of the neighboring Box Hill, too, there reposes the body of a certain Major Labelliere, who, tradition says, was buried head downwards.

Finally, there is the case of the eccentric American millionaire, William Barbour, known as the "Yankee Dick Whittington," who, tramping as a poor, homeless lad in the Adirondack Mountains, sat down on a boulder to eat some food he had begged. A farmer passing by, and noting his dejected attitude, offered him work; fifty years later, when he had "made his pile," Barbour had the enoromus boulder transported to the top of the highest peak in the range, and beneath this strange tombstone his body now rests.

Fighting Field Fires.

An automobile equipped with buckets, shovels, and a thirty-gallon tank full of fire-extinguishing chemicals, last summer paid for itself many times over in service rendered to grain farmers living about a small western town, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine. As each farmer has his telephone, the first sign of a fire in a grain field resulted in a request for the chemical truck.

Hair Thefts In France.

Human hair thieves are terrorizing the women of France.

Owing to the "bobbed hair" craze human hair has been in enormous demand recently and fabulous prices are being paid by beauties who find their own locks will not grow fast enough to put them in the swim of fashion.

At Mirmande, near Toulouse, a party of seven men, each carrying a large pair of shears and a bag filled with human hair attacked pretty young Odette Pujos, who was guarding a herd of goats.

While one of the assailants placed a handkerchief over her eyes and another gagged her, a third shore her of her magnificent blond tresses which were famous for miles around.

Humans Reared by Wild Animals.

In view of the success of "Tarzan of the Apes" as a film and as a novel, it is interesting to note that there have been Tarzans in real life.

Not long ago there was the case of a child who was reared by monkeys. A human being was discovered near Naini Tal having a thick coating of hair which gave him the appearance of a monkey. It is thought that owing to this curious resemblance a troop of monkeys had adopted him as a child. When discovered, this strange creature was treated as a wild animal, but on further examination vaccination marks on both arms gave convincing proof of his true origin.

Another curious incident befell a shooting party in India in 1884. Dr. Condon, of the Indian Civil Service, was in command. In a forest they discovered an unkempt object which they prepared to shoot, but which, on closer inspection, proved to be a boy walking on all fours.

It was at first difficult to capture him, but after a good deal of trouble he was persuaded to come nearer. Later it was found that he had lived in a den of wolves and ate only the raw flesh brought to him by his animal foster parents. His arrival in Europe created surprise and consternation, but willing guardians were soon found.—Tit-Bits.

Signal Tones.

Three different signal tones from an electric bell of ordinary appearance, calling the householder to the front, the rear or the side door with unerring precision, are now made possible by the ingenious device of an Ohio manufacturer. The two electromagnetic coils of the bell have separate armatures, one of which carried the bell clapper, while the other constitutes a buzzer.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Where Do Ground Birds Sing?

The ground birds are all tree singers or air singers; they must have an elevated stage to speak from. Our brown thrasher, like its congeners the catbird and the mocking bird, delights in a high branch of some solitary tree, when it will pour out its rich and intricate warble for an hour together.

Would Abolish Coroners.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Oct. 5.—Some of the councillors of St. John County are out for abolishing the office of coroner, and at a council meeting introduced a general discussion on the uselessness of coroners in general, and reaffirmed a resolution passed in October, 1919, asking the Government to abolish the office of coroner and have the district health officer perform the duties.

Mothers' Advice

The responsibility for a daughter's future largely rests with the mother. The right influence and the information which is of vital interest to the daughter imparted at the proper time has not only saved the life but insured the success of many a beautiful girl. When a girl's thoughts become sluggish with headaches, dizziness, or a disposition to sleep, pains in back or lower limbs and a desire for solitude, her mother should come to her aid and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, will at this time prepare the system for the coming change and start this trying period in a young girl's life without pain or irregularities. Thousands of women residing in every part of the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtues of this medicine, and what it has done for their daughters.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough for what it has done for my daughter. She was 15 years of age, very sickly and pale and she had to stay home from school most of the time. She suffered agonies from backache and dizziness and was without appetite. For 3 months she was under the doctor's care and got no better, always complaining about her back and side aching so I did not know what to do. I read in the papers about your wonderful medicine so I made up my mind to try it. She has taken five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and doesn't complain any more with her back and side aching. She has gained in weight and feels much better. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all mothers and daughters."—Mrs. M. Fisore, 515 Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y.

The undersigned will sell for Miss Chinneck at the residence, Richard street, opposite Dr. Vrooman's, on Saturday, Oct. 9th, at 1 p.m., a quantity of household furniture, beds, bedding, carpets, rugs, crockery, and a lot of small wares, as she is breaking up housekeeping. Terms of sale, cash.

No Increase in Price.

Notwithstanding the enormous increase in the cost of production, over three times previous to war prices, that great weekly, the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal, have decided to accept renewals and new subscriptions at the old rate ($1.50 a year) from all who remit before December 1st, 1920. This should be good news to readers of that big weekly. The Family Herald has been vastly improved and is beyond doubt the greatest value in newspapers.

Plant Bulbs.

This is the season of the year for setting out bulbs and the tulip has no peer for attractiveness, and the Darwin tulip is the queen of them all. The Horticultural Society has secured from Holland a supply of this famous variety, which are being distributed among the members. Everyone joining the society upon payment of the nominal fee of $1.00 gets $2.35 worth of Darwin tulips besides the other advantages accruing to membership. The Society is again donating a large number of bulbs to the Harvey Warner Park and will also fill the beds around the monument at the Court House.

Young People's Society.

The young people of Trinity Methodist Church met last Monday evening for a social time and organized a Young People's Union. The following officers were elected :

A fine musical program was enjoyed by all, after which light refreshments were served. The first meeting was so successful that it augurs well for a good attendance every Monday night. Meetings are called for 7.45 and all young people, especially strangers, will be welcomed.

CLAIMS LEADERSHIP.

Woman Wants to Be Successor of Mary Baker Eddy.

Carrie Barbour Galyon, a dissenter from the Christian Science situation which arose when the directors and trustees became involved in litigation, has proclaimed herself "revealed as the successor of Mary Baker Eddy," and has served written notice of the revelation upon the boards, attorneys and parties in the court controversy.

Mrs. Galyon resigned from the mother church a year ago, after she charged the board with an attempt to oust her. Immediately afterward she went to New York city, but returned to Boston several months ago at the behest of a large number of adherents, and since her return has been planning the "revelation" which she declares has now been made apparent to directors and trustees alike.

The claimant to the leadership of the Christian Science Church for a year has been a leader of a group of dissenters, who said the directors and trustees brought about the court action which Mrs. Galyon now characterizes as a "disgraceful wrangle which would have been avoided if the officers of the church obeyed Mrs. Eddy's law, and permitted her successor to be chosen by the people."

In a notice sent to John W. Doorly of Leech, England, president of the Mother Church, Mrs. Galyon declares that he withheld a portion of Mrs. Eddy's prophecy when he quoted her concerning the successorship of the founder and leader, and that he failed to declare that Mrs. Eddy made a promise that her successor would be revealed through the body of the church.

In a notice issued by Mrs. Galyon recently, she said: "The Christian Science movement is the only large organization in the world that is attempting to rule without a head, or a president or a leader. Mary Baker Eddy left explicit word of command that there must be a leader after she passed on and stated that the leader should be chosen by the body of the church. Mrs. Eddy's statements regarding her successor are to be found in her book, 'First Church of Christ Scientist, Miscellany,' pages 343 and 346.

"It is evident to all thinking people that the present litigation into which the church has been thrown is caused only by the fact that they have no leader to render decisions, and in the absence of the leader to act as judge they cannot be expected to have the ability, nor is it their business or desire, to stand in the position of a leader.

"The board of directors and the board of trustees of the Christian Science Church have had for some time sufficient proof in their hands that Carrie Barbour Galyon is Mary Baker Eddy's successor."

Mrs. Galyon is a Virginian and has been a Christian Scientist since she was a child. She was prominent in the field in Tennessee before she practiced in New York and in Boston. She declares she was "revealed" to the board of directors a year ago, but preferred to wait until the board yielded obedience to Mrs. Eddy's written statement and prophecy before she announced herself as the founder's successor.

CURIOS OF A KING.

George V. Has Strange Mementoes In His Collection.

Probably few of the thousands who visit Windsor Castle every year have seen the museum near the Equerries' entrance, in which King George treasures his private collection of curious, ranging from war relics to walking sticks, says Answers.

Here you will see mementoes of every campaign of recent years, including King Theodore's cap and gold seal, presented to Queen Victoria at the conclusion of the Abyssinian war; the scarlet saddle, edged with gold, captured from the late Ameer of Afghanistan, and the crimson banner of Wad Bishara, which fell into Lord Kitchener's hands at Firket.

Here, too, is to be seen a wonderful collection of old china, consisting of 10,000 pieces, and valued at three-quarters of a million dollars.

One, a beautiful dessert service of Sevres ware, alone represent a value of $150,000, while a breakfast service given to George 3, on his birthday in 1810 by his daughters is worth $50,000.

Among the furniture are the writing desk given by Henry VIII. to Anne Boleyn on their wedding day, and a Venetian chair, used by the Doges and dated 1670. There is also a solid silver table of the same period.

The King's collection of feather cloaks is valued at $50,000. They are composed of gold, black and crimson feathers from the wings of a now extinct species of parrot, and were given to George IV. by the king of the Sandwich Islands in 1824.

Not far away may be found the collection of walking sticks King Edward inherited from his mother, numbering 187 in all, many of them of great value. One, purchased at the Culloden sale in 1897, is carved to represent Wisdom and Folly; another, of black oak, originally belonged to Charles II., while a third is made from the wood of the luckless Alabama.

Not the least interesting feature of the royal museum is the collection of gold keys, presented to King George and his royal predecessors on the occasion of opening buildings, to each of which is attached a brief account of the ceremony with which it is connected.

BRITANNIA RULES THE WAVES

Navy League of Canada Inaugurates Campaign on Trafalgar Day—Funds Required for Widows and Orphans of Men Who Died That We Might Live.

(Specially written for the campaign by D. McClew.)

Captain, the Rev. S. Boal, a Chaplain of the British Navy, and closely allied with the upbuilding of the good work done, and being done, by the Navy League of Canada, arrived in Napanee on Tuesday evening and left town on Wednesday afternoon. The object of his visit was to meet the officers of the Lennox and Addington Branch to consult with them regarding the inauguration of the "1920 Fall Campaign," which will be held throughout Canada for the week containing Trafalgar Day, Thursday, October 21st. The objective for the county is placed at the modest sum of $2,000, which will no doubt be greatly exceeded.

At time of going to press the list of special officers, and of the executive, is not complete, but will be available for publication in the next issue of this paper. A treasurer, with headquarters at Napanee, will be appointed, and sub-treasurers at different points throughout the county, with committees to assist them in their work of collecting funds for this most worthy cause. The time for the carrying out of this work is very short, and all those who wish to contribute will greatly lessen the labors of the executive by handing their subscriptions to the nearest or most convenient sub-treasurer. Readers of this article will readily understand that while every effort will be made to see every person in the county, such however will be impossible. Do not wait to be asked—just give as the Lord has prospered you.

It seems almost superfluous to say what the funds to be collected in this campaign will be used for, but lest there be a doubt in any mind it is better to state the matter plainly. Funds are required for pensions to the widows and orphans of sailors of the mercantile marine, who lost their lives on active service, and to carry on the work of training Canadian boys for positions in the navy.

What Canada owes to the Navy and British Mercantile Marine is well illustrated in the following interview, kindly granted by Capt. Boal, to the writer. In speaking of Canada's progress Capt. Boal said, "Canada has gone through the trials of the great war. The money cost is estimated at $1,800,000,000, yet the country goes on in its great career as a producer. The war stimulated our industry in several ways, checked it in others. The record of the country's progress in what may be roughly described in the last decade—is to be read in the following comparative figures :

Population—
	1910	1920
	7,192,000	9,000,000
External Trade—
	1911	1920
Imports—	$472,192,246	..$1,064,576,000
Exports—	$297,196,365	$1,239,492,000
Our Bank Deposits—
	1911	1919
	$909,964,000	$1,746,878,000

Capt. Boal said, "Here we see the value of our agriculture production trebled in ten years, and our manufacturing production increase in the same ratio in eight years. Our bank deposits doubled and the number of our manufacturing establishments almost doubled. The capital employed in agriculture almost doubled ; our foreign trade three times what it used to be. What other country, said the gallant captain, can show such an expansion of trade and wealth as that of Canada. To carry our goods to the markets of the world we must have ships and more ships, so that Canada may keep her place within the Empire."

There are many reasons why the people of Canada should respond generously to this appeal now being made and in the hope that it may in some slight measure help in the good work the writer submits the following for the careful perusal and consideration of his readers.

There is no more glorious page in the history of the great war than that contributed by the men of the British Navy and of the British Mercantile Marine, by their bravery and self-sacrifice in the face of known and constant danger, all the mre terrible because it could not be foreseen. They made it possible to transport the armies of Britain and the United States to France, and to provision them when there. They kept the commerce of the allied world alive and brought, not alone munitions to the troops, but food and fuel to the people of the allied countries. They are the men who defied and defeated the base iniquity of the German submarine campaign, and it is not too much to say that without their brave devotion the war would not have been won. Admiral Sims, of the American navy, made a grateful tribute when he said, "without the British merchant seamen our army and navy would have been helpless."

Do you know that we are an Empire, within an Empire ? Do you realize that the insurance which has maintained this has been the sea power, and this is the British Navy ? This includes the Merchant Navy, the efficient fighting force of the Empire, which has never been used except in self-defence. Our premium as a nation, within the Empire, is now overdue, and Canada desires to pay it. Without this insurance, viz. the Sea Power of Britain, Canada is only a continental adjunct to the United States of America. Canada must take her place as a maritime nation, pay her premium, and at the same time remain an integral part of the British Empire. She can do for herself what England did for herself. She can carry her own merchandise in her own ships, manned and officered by Canadiians, protected by an all-Canadian navy sufficient for the country's needs, and an additional strength to the bulwarks of the British people.

Canada is rated in ships as the eighth maritime power in the world, but those ships are neither officered nor manned by Canadians to an extent which insures Canadian safety. The cab of every Canadian locomotive must carry a trained Canadian engineer to insure the safety of our land-borne commerce. It is as necessary our ships should be manned by Canadians as that our railway trains should be so manned. Canadian overseas trade amounts to $1,046,000,000. As owners of this enormous commerce we must not leave our insurance premiums unpaid ; nor let the people of the British Isles pay them for us, nor drift into the position of a mere up-state reflection of the U.S.A. No, let us honorably and decently do our duty as a Canadian nation.

Ships alone do not make a Navy ; the sea power of Canada depends upon Canadian boys. Seamen cannot be made without training. There are in Canada at the present moment over 2,000 lads undergoing intensive sea training, and already through the instrumentality of the Navy League, each ship of the Canadian Maritime Marine carries some of the lads who have been trained. The government of this country realizes that the only hope of Canada taking her place upon the seas depends upon the efforts and energies of the Navy League of Canada along these lines, and this country cannot hope to attain a Canadian personnel and Canadian Navy unless the lines laid out by the Navy League are brought to fruition. There is not a community from Cape Breton on the Atlantic, to Vanvouver Island on the Pacific, but must be told of this great work. This conception of national greatness is so big, so wonderful, so new, that it must reach every patriotic citizen of this country.

You are proud and happy in your Canadian home, with your wife and family—do you ever think, on a stormy night, of the men who sail the seas. Who even when ashore may be a thousand miles from home, and all it means, that the blankets and tea, the cotton shirt you wear, and half of what the wife buys for home comforts, and what you sell, or others sell for you, need men upon the seas, winter and summer. Their lives, even under the most favorable conditions, are not a hundredth part as comfortable as yours. Whatever provision is made can never take the place of home. These men are necessary to your prosperity. The nation which prospers materially, and makes no provision for those through whose discomfort it prospers, is doomed to spiritual stagnation.

To pay the insurance premium of our safety 17,000 merchant seamen died through the great war. Their widows and their children have become a national trust. This country showed its willingness to bear its great imperial burdens by subscribing immense sums so that those who are left might not be in distress. The war is over, but the wreckage of war remains. The people of this country having undertaken to see that the widows and orphans of the men who died that we might remain an Empire, within an Empire, will surely never refuse to undertake this burden. The Navy League of Canada undertakes the work.

To attain success in this great campaign entails a vast expenditure of energy in work and organization, but the most patent factor in assuring a successful issue is prayer, both public and private. It is to be hoped that for the next two Sundays, preceeding Trafalgar Day, prayers for the success of the campaign will be said in all the churches, not only in Lennox and Addington, but throughout the length and breadth of Canada.

WONDERFUL NEW TEA WAREHOUSE

The magnificent building shown above, and situated at the corner of St. Lawrence Boulevard and La Royer Streets, Montreal, will be occupied by the SALADA TEA COMPANY about February 1st, next. The building at present occupied by SALADA, at the corner of St. Paul and St. Sulpice Streets, Montreal, was erected by them eleven years ago, but for some time has proved inadequate for their business.

Other SALADA warehouses are situated at TORONTO and BOSTON.

Trial by Ordeal.

Trial by ordeal still exists in some parts of Japan. If a theft takes place in a household, all the servants are required to write a certain word with the same brush. The conscience is supposed to betray its workings in the waves of the ideographs written. Tracing an ideograph involves such an effort of muscular directness and undivided attention that this device often leads to the discovery of the guilty party.

Indigo.

Indigo dye was always made from the juice of the indigo plant until the Germans invented a way of making it synthetically. English manufacturers of serge have recently been testing the natural and the artificial dyes, with the result that the natural gives a depth of color from 5 to 20 per cent. superior to the artificial. H. E. Armstrong, an authority on dyes, says the German process does not make indigo, but only one of the constituents of indigo, called indigotin.

The Thirteenth Commandment

By

RUPERT HUGHES

Copyright by Harper & Brothers

She dreaded the forlorn journey home to her dreary room. As she stepped out of the door someone moved forward with uplifted hat. It was Tom Duane. He looked very spick and span. His smile illumined the dull street and his hand clasped hers with a saving strength. It lifted her from the depths like a rope let down from the sky.

Daphne would have been more content if Duane had been Clay Wimburn. It was Clay's duty to be there at such a time, of all times.

Of course he did not know that this night was to be crucial for her, but he should have known. Mr. Duane knew. It never occurred to Daphne that Reben had warned Duane of the debut of his protegee and had invited him—in fact, had dared him—to watch the test of her abilities.

All she knew was that Duane was proffering homage and smiles and the prefaces of courtship. Daphne might have failed to gain the hearts of her audience, for all her toil, but here was a heart that was hers without effort.

Perhaps Duane was her career. He was at least an audience that she could sway. And she was miserably in need of some one that would pay her the tribute of submission.

So now when he said, "Won't you let me take you home in my car?" she could hardly snub a heaven-sent messenger.

She said, "Thank you—you're very kind—but—" Oh, all right!" And she bounded in.

When Duane said: "You must be hungry after all that hard work. Aren't you?" she said, "Yes, I guess I am—a little."

When he said, "Where shall we eat?" she answered, "Anywhere."

"Claremont?" he suggested.

This startled her, gave her pause. Yet there was something piquant about the proposal.

Satan or Raphael had whispered to her an invitation to revisit the scene of her late humiliation with Clay. With Duane's magic purse there would be no danger of a snub from the waiters; with his own car there would be no risk of footing it home.

Then an imp of mischief spoke for her and said, "All right!"

Duane told the chauffeur and the car shot like a javelin from the lighted street into the deep forest-night of Central park.

What would Clay say? But, after all, he had failed her in a crisis. Perhaps he had turned his heart elsewhere. Men were impatient, vindictive, fickle.

When Claremont was reached and Duane handed Miss Kip out he noted that her hand was hotter than his own and a little quick to escape, her face was flushed and her lips parted as if with excitement. He assumed that the speed of the ride and the tang of adventure were to blame.

While the waiters were serving the supper and while he was attacking it with the frank appetite of honest hunger she recounted the evening's disaster as calmly as if it were the story of somebody else. In fact, she was standing off and regarding herself with the eyes of an alien. We change so fast that the persons we were yesterday are already strangers, and their acts the acts of distant relatives. Her calm was really the numbness of shock. The anguish would come tomorrow.

"I can't understand myself at all," Daphne said. "I went through every one of the motions, but I couldn't reach the audience once. I was like a singer with a bad cold—singing in a foreign language—you don't know what the song is all about, but you know that it never quite gets on the key."

"You mustn't be discouraged."

"Oh, yes, I must! I couldn't be an actress in a thousand years. Mr. Batterson told me so himself."

Duane felt the truth of this, but it hurt him to have her feel it. It offended his chivalry to realize how impolite fate could be to so pretty a girl. He hated to see her reduced to the necessity of proving how plucky she could be. He tried to find an escape for her. He said:

"You're far too good for the stage."

"I don't believe that for a minute," she protested. "But I've got to find something I can do."

"May I help you to decide?"

"If you only would! But I'm getting to be a nuisance."

"You are a—a—to me you are a—well, you're not a nuisance."

He dared not tell her what she was, especially as the waiter had set the bill at his elbow and was standing off in an attitude of ill-concealed impatience for the tip, which he knew would be large. Mr. Duane always gave the normal ten per cent and a bit extra. He tipped wisely but not too well, knowing that an extravagant tip wins a waiter's contempt almost more than none at all. The head waiter fairly cooed "Good night" and almost gave them a blessing.

The starter had Mr. Duane's car waiting for him at the curb and lifted his hat with one hand as he smuggled a quarter away with the other. He stepped in to lay the linen laprobe over their knees with reverence, closed the door exquisitely and murmured, "Good night!"

The car was an aristocrat; it floated from the curb with a swanlike sweep.

Daphne thought of Clay and herself plodding homeward. She seemed to see them or their wraiths staggering disconsolately along. She felt very sorry for them. Here was a chance to save one of them—both of them, in fact; for in taking her financial burden from Clay's shoulders she would be twice strengthening him. If she were to accept Duane as her husband then her problems would be solved—and Clay would be free of her.

To be Mrs. Tom Duane; to step into the society of society; to lift her father and mother from a position of meekness in Cleveland to a post of distinction in New York; to solve at once all the hateful, loathsome, belittling riddles of money; to be the bejeweled and feted and idolized wife and mistress of this young American grand duke; to buy that impossible trousseau, or better; to live in a New York palace instead of a flat; to go about in her own limousine instead of an occasional taxicab; to be fortune's darling instead of a member of the working classes, struggling along with bent neck under a yoke beside a discouraged laboring man!

When the car reached her building she was resolved to see Duane no more. She could not tell him so. After all, he had been everything that was courtesy and charity. It would hardly have been polite to treat him with absolute indifference. Duane got down and helped her out and took her to the door, which was locked at this late hour. While they waited for the doorman to answer the bell she was paying him his wages:

"You are wonderfully kind. I had a gorgeous evening. You saved my life."

She had said more than she intended—if not more than he had earned.

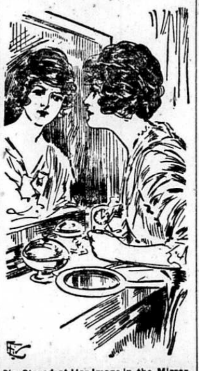
"Then may I call soon?"

"Of course."

"Tomorrow?"

"I—well, I'll let you know."

"Fine! Telephone me at— I'll write it out for you. I'm not often at the club where you found me, and my number isn't in the book." He wrote on his card his telephone address and gave it to her as the doorman appeared.



She Stared at Her Image in the Mirror.

He murmured, "Don't forget." She murmured, "I won't." Both said "Good night." Then the doorman gathered her in and hoisted her to her lowly eyrie. It was very different from where she would have gone as Mrs. Duane.

But when she was in her room she tore his card to pieces—after she had looked at it. She stared at her image in the mirror. She hated what she saw there.

She vowed to break her promise to Tom Duane. She vowed to forget his telephone number. But it danced about in the dark long after she had closed her eyes.

The next morning she overslept even beyond the extra hour the Chivvises permitted themselves and the stranger within their gates on Sundays.

When Daphne appeared at breakfast, trying not to yawn, Mrs. Chivvis greeted her with a voice as cold and dry as the toast, and as brittle:

"You were rather late getting in last night—or this morning, rather."

Daphne's answer was not an explanation, but it was better:

"Oh, I know it, Mrs. Chivvis, but I lost my position last night. Yes! I played the principal part and killed it, and now I'm not going on the stage any more."

Mrs. Chivvis was touched. "You poor child! It really is—just too bad!" She pondered, then she brightened: "I'm sorry you're disappointed, but I'm glad you're not to be in the theater. It must be very wicked."

"It's mighty difficult," said Daphne.

Mrs. Chivvis thought a moment more, then she said:

"Did I tell you?— No, I don't believe I did—you were away—but Mr. Chivvis gets his vacation next week. He's got to take it when his turn comes. The man who was going now couldn't be spared, so we have to leave Tuesday. I'm going, of course, so I can't give you your meals. You can get your breakfasts in the kitchenette. Of course I'll allow off whatever is right."

"Oh," Daphne said. "I'll be all right, I guess."

Daphne had not realized how much she depended on Mrs. Chivvis till now. She was to be left alone at the very time when she was most in need of society. The whole world was forsaking her.

CHAPTER XIII.

When the Chivvises had gone Daphne assailed the task of composing her letter of resignation from Reben's employ. It was not easy to resign with dignity and the necessary haste.

She sent it off by messenger. It was none too prompt, for Reben had already dictated a very polite request for Daphne's head. When he received her letter he recalled his stenographer and dictated a substitute for his first letter. In this he expressed his regret at learning Daphne's decision to resign; the former understudy had come back from the road, he said, and would resume her work. He begged Daphne to accept the inclosed check for two weeks' salary in lieu of the usual notice, and hoped that she would believe him faithfully hers.

Daphne felt a proud impulse to return the fifty dollars. She wrote a letter to go with it. She looked again, and saw it was the first money she had ever earned. She hated to let it go. She decided to frame it and keep it to point to in after years as the beginning of her great fortune.

Late in the afternoon, when the western sky was turning into a loom for crimson tapestries almost as rich as her own dreams, she went to her brother's apartment.

There the New Girl found the Old Woman in the throes of finance. Leila had brought her check book and her bank book to her husband. Her affairs were in a knot.

He laughingly offered to help her. She was hurt by his laughter, but not half so deeply as he was by his discovery of her monetary condition. He had established her bank account in a mood of adoration, a precious sacrifice on the altar of love. She had not cherished it, but scattered it heedlessly. And money was peculiarly precious now in the final agonies of the hard times, when only the fittest of the fittest could survive the last tests. Credit was the water cask, and dollars were the hard biscuits of a boatload of survivors from a wreck. Land might be reached if they held out, but self-denial was vital.

Bayard gazed at Leila with wondering love and terror. She was both divinity and devil in his eyes. He groaned:

"Are you trying to wreck me? You know how hard I'm working and how much I need money in my business and how much it means to your future, but you won't stop buying and charging and burning my poor little earnings. We discharged a stenographer yesterday because we wanted to save her salary of fifteen dollars—and here's a check for a pair of shoes for you that cost sixteen.

"But tell me one thing more before I'm carted off to Bloomingdale in a straitjacket. Why, in heaven's name, why—admitting you just had to have that pitiful little pair of shoes—why, when you wrote the check, didn't you subtract it from your balance instead of adding it? I ask you!"

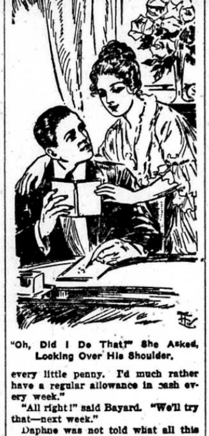
"Oh, did I do that?" she asked, looking over his shoulder. "So I did!" and she put her cheek close to his and giggled.

He shook his head in imbecile infatuation, and drew her around into his arms.

That was what Daphne overheard when the maid let her in. She found Leila resting in Bayard's lap.

Bayard did not tell Daphne what his conference with Leila had been. He simply closed the check book and the bank book and said to Leila: "I'll send the bank my check for thirty-eight cents and ask 'em to close their account. They'll be mighty glad to do it."

"And so will I," said Leila. "It was awfully hard work keeping track of every little penny. I'd much rather have a regular allowance in cash every week."



"Oh, Did I Do That?" She Asked, Looking Over His Shoulder.

"All right!" said Bayard. "We'll try that—next week."

Daphne was not told what all this talk was about, but she made a fair guess, though she pretended not to.

She told about her failure and her future and Leila praised her courage and her optimism. They dined cheerfully and Bayard decided that the best preparation for the hard work ahead of him would be an evening of gayety. He invited his wife and his sister to go with him to the Winter Garden, where the typical "Sunday concert" of New York was given.

CHAPTER XIV.

Then the Chivvises came back from their vacation unexpectedly early. They had found the hotels expensive and Mr. Chivvis was afraid that his job would be snatched from him if he were not there to hold it down.

Clay called on Daphne that evening and the Chivvises retreated to their own room. But as they could be overheard it was evident that they could overhear, and the lovers found no chance to say any of the things that frightened their souls.

One evening Daphne said to Clay in as low a voice as he could hear: "Mrs. Chivvis is growing uneasy, honey, about our being together every evening. I told her we were engaged, but she didn't seem convinced. Perhaps you would let me wear that beautiful engagement ring again. I was a fool to give it back to you. May I have it or—"

Clay blenched in misery. "I—I'm afraid I— You see, I hadn't paid much on it; and last week I had an insulting letter from the jeweler. He threatened to sue me and notify my firm, and I—well, I had to send it back."

OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

After Years of Suffering with Dyspepsia, this Fruit Medicine Gave Relief

MLLE ANTOINETTE BOUCHER

917 Dorion St., Montreal.

"I am writing to tell you that I owe my life to 'Fruit-a-tives' for this remedy relieved me when I had abandoned all hope of ever recovering my health.

I suffered terribly with Dyspepsia. I had it for years and all the medicines I took did not do me any good.

I read something about 'Fruit-a-tives' being good for all Stomach Troubles and Disorders of Digestion so I tried them. After finishing a few boxes, I was entirely relieved of the Dyspepsia and my general health was restored.

I thank the great fruit medicine, 'Fruit-a-tives', for this wonderful relief."

Mlle ANTOINETTE BOUCHER.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

He was so downcast that she answered with mock cheer: "Oh, that's all right, honey; it doesn't matter. After all, it's only a ring. And we have each other."

"But we haven't each other. This way of living is driving me crazy. I'll be all right as soon as these hard times are over and I can make some commissions. But it's so dismal to wait. Couldn't we get married and live on my salary?"

"I could if you could."

He caught her in his arms so violently that she squealed.

The next day Clay telephoned to her his firm had just offered him the choice of accepting half his salary or turning in his resignation. It was really impossible for two to live on half of what was hardly enough for one.

Daphne cried a long while in her room. She got out her list of ways to earn fifty thousand dollars again and cried over that.

There is much foolish and futile protest against the nowadays woman who goes into business outside her home. But the fact is that it is her business that began it. Her business left the home first and she is merely following it to the places where new conditions and inventions have centralized and mechanized it.

New conditions have taken her distaff and her washtub and her cookery and gossip into the woolen mills and steam laundries and restaurants and telephone exchanges. She has had to go thither to do her necessary work. Even the entertainers, the singers, dancers, tellers of stories, who used to stir the seraglios and the castle halls have been gathered into opera houses and theaters and into vaudeville and moving picture palaces.

Daphne, having no gifts for spinning, cooking, or laundry, tried the theater. Her old-fashioned lover protested, and she went, anyway. But she was not suited to the theater, and she retreated with nothing to show for her expedition except her shattered pride and the fifty-dollar check for two weeks' salary.

Daphne began anew to hunt for work; work, the thrice blessing that kills time and makes money and tames passion. But the world seemed to be full of every other trouble except work. Even had she been skilled, as she was not, it would have availed her little, since skilled laborers were being turned off by the thousands. And unskilled laborers were being turned off by the tens of thousands.

Clay had saved nothing against the rainy season. He had found his salary too small for his courtship requisites; now that his salary was halved his courtship had to be reduced to the minimum of expense.

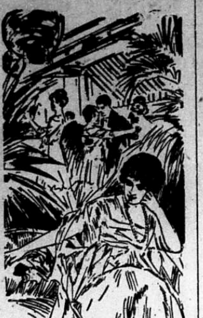
Bayard and Leila had more money to spend, and they made ambitious voyages. But Daphne and Clay must swelter with the other stay-at-home millions. Clay denied himself even the two weeks' vacation allotted to him. Bayard took his, however, and carried Leila off to Newport, where they boarded humbly, if expensively. While they were gone, at their suggestion, Daphne moved down into their apartment. It was large and beautiful, and, as Clay said, it was "not infested with Chivvises."

Now and then Clay quarreled with Daphne because of her obstinate determination to have a trade of her own. Then they made up. And quarreled anew—lovers' quarrels, summer storms that break the sultry tension of the air and make peace endurable.

Bayard came back alone. Leila had decided that it was better for her health to stay at Newport till the cooler weather came and her summer wardrobe had been worn out.

So Bayard joined the army of town-tied husbands, the summer widowers. He went back once a week on furlough to spend a Newport Sabbath with his wife. He became one of the Friday-night-to-Monday-morning excursionists. There was leisure enough in his office.

He insisted on Daphne's keeping her room in his apartment, and of evenings he affixed himself to her and Clay and made their company a crowd. But they welcomed him as a chaperon of a sort. Also, he paid his way with liberality, except for occasional spasms of retrenchment, when he economized atrociously. He predicted that good times would never come again. The whole world had gone to pot and would never come out.



Leila Had Decided That It Was Better for Her Health to Stay at Newport Till the Cooler Weather Came and Her Summer Wardrobe Had Been Worn Out.

Suddenly he changed his tune; suddenly the whisper went about that hard times were ending.

In his bachelor days, when Bayard was growing in commercial stature like a young giant, he had regarded his business with all the warmth of a poet. His office building was his Acropolis and his office the peculiar temple of his muse; and her name was Profit. He thrilled like a poet to the epic inspiration of a big sale, and he knew a joy akin to the poet's revision of his scansion if he devised a scheme for reducing overhead charge or wastage.

It was thus that he had made himself important enough to advance rapidly in his firm. And he had put a large share of his salary every week into a savings bank. With his extra commissions and bits of unexpected luck he had bought securities of impregnable value. These he had locked away in a safe-deposit vault. They paid him only four or five per cent, but they were as sure as anything mundane. And twice a year they granted him the lofty emotion of the coupon cutter.

He had paid cash for what merchandise he bought and demanded special discounts for it. In time the many mickles made a muckle. He had five thousand dollars' worth of bonds in his safe deposit box.

And then he married—pawned himself at the marriage shop. He kept his hoard a secret from Leila.

Now he saw a chance to use the talents that he had buried in a napkin. He filled the ears of Clay and Daphne with his market jargon. He was as unintelligible to Daphne as a mad Scot talking golfese.

"Look at Q. & O.," he would say; "sold at eighty-five a year ago. Friend of mine bought it. People who were in the know said it was going up. It ought to have gone up, but it didn't. Dropped slowly and sickeningly to forty-three. Today it is forty-six. If I had gone into the market the other day with five thousand dollars and snapped it up at forty-three I'd have cleaned up three hundred and a half in no time."

"First catch your five thousand dollars," said Clay.

"I've caught it," said Bayard. "I've had it all along."

"You have?" Clay groaned. "If I'd known that I'd have borrowed it to get married on."

"Not in a million years," said Bayard. "When I've made a killing with this money I'll make you all a present, but you couldn't pry this out of me with a crowbar. I wish I knew where to borrow more. If you can raise any money, Clay, don't you spend it in matrimony. A fellow can get married any time, but it's only once in ten years that you can climb aboard a market after a panic and ride in with the tide."

He went to his safe deposit vault, took out his bonds, carried them to the vice president of his bank, and borrowed all that he could raise on the securities. The bonds had fallen below par on account of the depression, but Bayard was granted 80 per cent of their face value, minus 30 days' discount at 5 per cent.

His anemic bank account was suddenly swollen by three thousand nine hundred and seventy-nine dollars and eighteen cents.

He sought out a broker, a college friend whom he could trust, to advise him honestly. They conferred on the stocks to buy. The old dilemma could not be escaped: those that offered the most profit offered the most risk. To buy on margins was further danger with promise of further profit.

Yet, after all, Bayard felt, to buy outright, however wise, was tame. Even if he doubled his money he would have only eight thousand in place of his four. And eight thousand was no fortune.

The question of what stocks to bet on was a thrilling one, requiring a long war council, but at length the disposition was made and he gave his broker the command to go forward.

The market crept up and up. Bayard turned his profits back into his speculation. He was growing rich. He was planning works of lavish charity, works of art, the purchase of a great reserve fund of securities.

Some years before, when President Taft was inaugurated, every omen was fine. The weather bureau promised fair weather. There was not a hint of storm anywhere upon the continent. And then a blizzard "backed in" from the ocean and played havoc with the throngs. So upon the era of good feeling and democratic equality and civilized peace the European war backed in from nowhere.

A young man from Serbia shot a grand duke of Austria, and the world heard of Sarajevo for the first time, but not the last. The bullet that slew the Austrian heir multiplied itself as by magic into billions of missiles. A young shoemaker from Bavaria, to his great surprise, killed an old Belgian schoolteacher he had never heard of. The schoolteacher fell into a ditch still clasping his umbrella. The shoemaker moved on with a strange appetite for shooting.

Refugees in hordes filled the roads with a new Pharaonic exodus. So many children plodded along in hungry flight that Herod might have been hunting down the innocents again.

With the moral cataclysm went a financial earthquake. The European exchanges flung their doors shut. The American exchanges tried to keep their shop windows open, but had to close them down.

Bayard Kip was among the first casualties. Before he could put in a stop order his margins were gone. He had said that prices, having struck bottom, could go no lower. Now the bottom itself was knocked out.

Prices stopped falling at last because of the closing of the markets. Europe established a general moratorium. America established one of sentiment. Everybody owed somebody else, and everybody gave tolerance because everybody needed it.

Night fell on the commercial world, a night illumined by horrors unknown before. Bayard's factory could not meet even its diminished pay roll. The president of the concern could not borrow a penny at the bank of which he was a director. The factory shut down, sending all its workmen into the hordes of the unemployed. The office forces were reduced to a minimum and the salaries of the minimum further reduced. Clay was thrown out of even his half-job and Bayard was put on half-pay.

Bayard's sober thoughts concerned themselves with extricating himself from the wreckage. It was not possible to debarrass himself of everything. He could not give up his expensive apartment. It was leased for a year and a half more. He could not dismiss his expensive wife; she was leased for ninety-nine years. He could not give up his character, his costly tastes, his zeal for front, the maintenance of a good facade.

The instinct of lovable bluff was seen in his telegram to Leila. He wanted her at home to comfort him, now that he had no business for her to hamper. Besides, he could not afford to keep her at Newport. Out of his ominously small funds he telegraphed her a liberal sum to pay her bills and her railroad fare and parlor car fare. He met her and found her astonishingly beautiful in her millionaire uniform.

He felt like the pauper who received a white elephant for a present. But she was gorgeous in her trappings. They embraced with mutual approval. He laughed:

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. Wives and Mothers of Canada

Stratford, Ont.:—"I am very enthusiastic in praise of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as a tonic for expectant mothers. I have had experience both with the 'Prescription' and without it, and am in a position to know that there is a vast difference. I was never nauseated or sick at all with my 'Prescription' babies but I was extremely uncomfortable with the others and my suffering was greater when I had not taken the 'Favorite Prescription'. I shall always take pleasure in recommending it to expectant mothers." —MRS. LEOTA M. PEPPER, 114 Grange St.

COULD NOT SLEEP

Halifax, N. S.:—"I was in a run-down, nervous condition for over two years, had been treated by several doctors and only found temporary relief. I could not sleep at night my heart palpitated so, and I was almost afraid to close my eyes. Being persuaded, I wrote and stated my symptoms to the Medical staff at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., I was advised to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery with the 'Favorite Prescription' and the 'Pleasant Pellets'. I did so with the very best results. I could sleep and became my natural self again. I certainly recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines to all sufferers, for they have done for me what doctors failed to do and they have saved me doctor bills, too."—MRS. JOHN HOMANS, Clam Harbor.

Toronto, Ont.:—"For over thirty years I have been a user of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. I have taken them for liver trouble, biliousness, constipation and sick-headaches and they always gave me the relief wanted. I am sure the 'Pleasant Pellets' have saved me many a sick spell. I can highly recommend them."—MRS. HANNAH BOWNESS, 60 Strange St.

FOR SPLINT LAMENESS

How to Deal With This Trouble in Young Horses.

A Bone Affection — Young Animals Most Commonly Affected—Symptoms Described and Treatment Offered.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

SPLINT lameness is a common complaint in young horses, and occasionally seen in horses of any age. It is rarely noticed in the hand limbs.

In order to understand and appreciate the trouble it is necessary to have an intelligent idea of the bony anatomy of the horse from the knee to the fetlock. This part is usually called the cannon. It consists of three bones: one large cannon bone extending the whole distance, from the knee in the fore limb, and from the hock in the hind limb to their respective fetlock joints. This bone has a broad and somewhat flat posterior surface. To each edge of this surface is attached (by ligamentous attachment) a small somewhat triangular-shaped bone, of considerable size above, where it articulates with the bones of the knee joint, and gradually decreases in size as it extends downwards, becoming quite small, and terminating in a small somewhat pea-shaped nodule, a little more than two-thirds down the large bone. These nodules can be readily felt, one on each side of the posterior aspect of the large bone, a few inches above the fetlock.

A splint consists in a bony union between the large and small bones.

Inflammation is set up, usually by concussion during travelling, especially on hard roads. As a result of this inflammation an exudate is thrown out, and the ligamentous attachment is destroyed. The exudate is, of course, soft at first, but soon become converted into bone and unites the large and small bones by bony union. An enlargement of greater or less size can usually be seen, which, in most cases, gradually disappears, by absorption until nothing can be noticed, and in many cases cannot be detected even by manipulation; at the same time the ossific (bony) union between the bones is permanent. Hence a horse that once has a splint will always have it, although all visible symptoms may have disappeared.

We often hear people say that "A horse over seven years old never has splints." This arises from the fact that the visible enlargement has usually disappeared, but the union of the bones remains. This absorption does not always occur. It is not uncommon to observe well marked splints in horses of any age. In some cases the splint is double—that is, an enlargement is noticable on each side of the limb. In such cases there is usually a bony deposit extending across the posterior surface of the large bone, from one splint to the other. This often causes an irritation to th esuspensory ligament (which passes down this surface) and causes permanent lameness. Splints seldom cause persistent or permanent lameness.

Symptoms.—In many cases no lameness is caused. The first intimation of the presence of splint is the appearance of the enlargement, which usually gradually disappears. In other cases lameness is well marked, and is usually characteristic. A horse lame from splint will usually stand and walk sound, but if asked to jog or trot will show well marked lameness, the head dropping decidedly when the foot of the sound leg touches the ground. The lameness is often noticed before there is any visible enlargement. The lameness is more marked when the horse trots down grade, and the intensity of the lameness usually increases as exercise is continued. Manipulation will usually reveal the seat of the trouble. By pressing between the thumb and finger the line of attachment between the large and small bones from the knee downwards, the seat can be located by the horse flinching when the seat of the trouble is pressed. And, if severe pressure be applied he will often rear on his hind legs. The usual seat of splint is on the inner surface of the fore cannen, or it may be on the outer surface, or both, and is usually one to three inches below the knee, but may be either higher or lower. The hind limb is seldom affected, but when it is the seat is usually on the outer surface.

Treatment.—Lameness is usually present only during the inflammatory stage. When the exudate becomes ossified (converted into bone) the inflammatory action ceases and lameness disappears, except the enlargement be of sufficient size, or so situated that it irritates the suspensory ligament or involves the joint. Hence treatment should be directed to allay inflammation as promptly as possible. Splint lameness usually appears very suddenly. A horse may go perfectly sound and after a rest of a variable duration when taken out to drive again, may show the characteristic symptoms noted.

The patient should be given perfect rest, and the seat of the splint should be showered with cold water frequently, or pounded ice kept to it for a few days. This will often be all that is necessary. In other cases lameness is more persistent, and it is necessary to apply a blister. A blister made of one dram each of biniodide of mercury and cantharides mixed with one oz. vaseline, and applied in the ordinary way will usually effect a cure. In some cases it is necessary to blister the second time (in about a month). In rare cases an operation by a veterinarian is necessary.

When lameness is not shown it is seldom considered necessary to treat splint, as the enlargement usually, gradually disappears without treatment.—J. H. Reed, V.S., O. A. College, Guelph.

STILL SLIM AND STRAIGHT

Tailleurs and One-Piece Frocks Have Changed Noticeably From Last Summer's Styles.

That Paris is herself again is the general agreement of those who have seen her fashion collections for 1920, according to Vogue. A new silhouette —the "rove a pouf," Paris calls it—is introduced by several of the houses and is featured by at least one of them. This silhouette, which adapts in charming frocks the bustle line of the eighties, is very becoming to certain small and slender types of women, who undoubtedly will feel the spell of its novelty and charm. Its novelty, however, is somewhat less in America than in Paris, for this silhouette was revived to some extent in America during the war.

Straight lines will be the rule of daytime. In tailleurs and one-piece frocks the lines seem to be even straighter than they were last summer. Hips are still lightly accentuated in some models, but this tendency is less noticeable this season than last. Many suits are simple and rather strictly tailored, while others made of taffeta and other silken materials are elaborated with embroidery and really belong in the class of afternoon costumes. In jackets there are at least two types—the short, square, free hanging type which is wrongly called "Eton"—for the Eton jacket is fitted with side seams and ends above the waist line—and the almost three-quarter length coat, which may be straight or have very bouffant skirts.

Some slight addition to the length of skirts might be specified, but, in general, street clothes remain short.

BRAND-NEW GIFT FOR BABY

Dainty Cover, to Fit Conveniently Over Carriage or Bed; Valuable for Porch Duty.

It does seem as if everything which baby can use (or cannot use) is given him upon his arrival.

Well, the category of baby things has not a very imminent limit, for always new things are coming to light, no matter whether you did happen to conclude the last time you bought a gift for a new baby that "after all, there's nothing new to give babies."

Perhaps you will not be able to buy this, but you will be able to make it.

Use either plain net (a course one will do just as well as a fine one) or a dotted one. A length of two yards will be just about right.

Cut the corners rounded and then bind the cover all about with narrow satin ribbon. The ribbon should be about three inches in width, so that you can fold it over and bind the wrong side of the cover with it also. Then with a bodkin run some elastic through the binding. Make the elastic just long enough to fit about a baby carriage. A large ribbon bow of the same color as the satin binding might be used at the top of it.

This cover will fit conveniently over carriage or bed. It is especially valuable for doing porch duty over the carriage, for there are no loose ends to flap in the winds thus to admit dirty Mr. Fly to the precincts of baby's dainty person.

THE TOWN COUNCIL.

"The beloved of the Lord shall dwell in safety by Him," Deut. 33-12; "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good," Romans 12-21; "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the Sons of God," 1 John 3-1.

The death occurred on Monday, September 27th, of Mrs. Katherine Helen Lanphier, at her home on Dundas street. Deceased was in her eighty-second year and had been in failing health for the past few months, but had been wonderfully active and energetic through out her life. She was tenderly nursed through her illness by her niece, Mrs. Clara McCormick. The funeral took place Wednesday afternoon to the family plot at Riverside cemetery.

R. Knight, of Knight's up-to-date Pharmacy, has just returned from a business trip to Toronto where he has been purchasing Xmas goods. Amongst other good things he was successful in getting some splendid toilet sets in French ivory and ebony, ideal Xmas presents. Also a full line of thermos bottles, stationery, music, both new and old. Full line of Neilson's chocolates in handsome boxes. Soaps, perfumes, etc. An inspection is respectfully solicited.

There has been a persistent rumor going around town and the surrounding district that several of the business firms in Napanee have been recently fined for profiteering. We have been endeavoring to verify these rumors, but find there is absolutely no ground for them. Profiteering, at the expense of the public, is certainly a serious business, as is also the spreading of false reports, and both are serious offenses against the laws of our lands. The spreading of fake reports oftentimes leads the guilty party into a heap of trouble, and we would advise caution. Serious injury and financial loss is the crop usually garnered from these false rumors.

The new train service recently inaugurated by the Canadian National-Grand Trunk lines, was done to save $60 per day running right rental to the C.P.R. for the use of their Harrowsmith-Kingston tracks. It will not only save the Canadian Government a great deal of money but will give the people of Lennox and Addington very much improved train service into Napanee, and will not detract much from the service from the north to Kingston. Passengers can now arrive in Napanee at 9.30 a.m. and go right through to Kingston, or can take the balance of the morning in Napanee leaving at 11.49 a.m. for Kingston returning from Kingston at 6 p.m. via Napanee to Yarker and Tweed. Another train leaves Bannockburn at 10 a.m., Tweed at 11.40 a.m., and Yarker at 3.30 p.m. arriving Napanee at 4.40 p.m. making connections with fast trains for the west and the 6.16 p.m. for the east.

It will be to our mutual interest if you read Gibbard's advertisement on page 5.

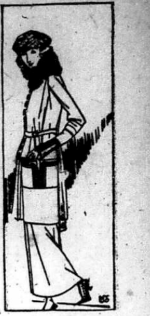
THE AUTUMN BRIDE CAN CHOOSE

Her Going Away Suit Advantageously at Robinson's

Advantageous from Style and Price Viewpoints



The Going Away Suit for the bride is more important than a wedding-gown because every bride must have a travelling suit, and in this age many of the smarter brides are being married in their travelling suits.

Indeed Autumn Suits are eminently suitable either for wedding gowns or travelling costumes. They are dignified in appearance, most becoming in style and cleverly tailored, into every garment is much warmth and much service.

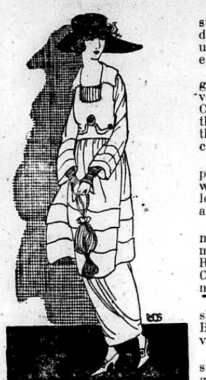
From the long list of autumn colorings, fashion has set her seal of approval on Brown, while Navy Blue is the choice of many wise shoppers. Velours, Silvertones, Tricotines, Gabardine and Serge are the materials employed.

Autumn Suits all feature long coat lengths, skirts are shorter than other seasons, collars are tailored but in most cases are convertible. Belts are a part of most models while tucking, pleating or novelty stitching also are used for decorating.

Every Suit is Specially Priced. We invite your investigations.

(Ladies' Suits are on Second Floor.)

CAN YOU IMAGINE YOURSELF GOWNED IN ONE OF THESE CHARMING AFTERNOON GOWNS?



Fashion has generously bestowed upon each and every dress in our dress section an unusual number of charming effects.

These cleverly conceived gowns come to us from the very best manufacturers in Canada, hence in every line they exhibit the newest thoughts of the best style creators.

This autumn much stress is placed on apron tunics, basque waists, knife pleated skirts, long waist lines, wide girdles and color combinations.

In the realm of materials, more fashionable gowns are made from Crepe-back Satin, Radium Crepe, Georgette, Crepe-de-Chine, Satin Charmeuse and Taffeta.

Among autumn colorings shades such as Navy Blue, Brown, Taupe and Black, prevail in fashionable demand.

In our dress cabinets the styles are indeed various, each garment differs from the gown next in line. We offer our patrons unlimited selections.

These gowns are all reasonably priced when one considers that in buying frocks ready-made you eliminate all elements of chance.

May we have the pleasure of showing you?

DRESS SECTION—SECOND FLOOR.

CHOOSE HATS THAT MATCH-UP WITH YOUR OTHER WEARABLES

In buying your autumn wardrobe it is advantageous to buy where you can group all your wearables together, where you can match-up and blend your millinery with your autumn suit, coat or dress.

Such hats as the two herein described are emblematical of our millinery stock and will give you some conception of the very high-class correctly styled hats which are always obtainable at our store.

A small, off-the-face hat is composed of Sand Duvetyn in the crown, while Navy Lyons velvet makes the brim. The brim is braided with sand braid and is further ornamented by a smart wing gracefully attached on the front section of brim.

The vogue of close fitting hats is emphasized in this model of brown hatter's plush and lyons velvet. A face veil banded with plush can be worn fastened snugly around the neck or thrown back over the hat. A narrow ribbon in pumpkin and gold shades holds the veil in places, while the one side is finished with a corsage of french flowers.

CORSETS AND AUTUMN CLOTHES

Good Taste in Dress Must Find Its First Impression in the Right Corsets.

The woman who by self-study will find the corset that best expresses her individuality and does not radically change her style from season to season is far better dressed than the superficial woman who follows every whim of fashion and distorts her figure with unsuited corset styles.

It has been written that violent contrasts destroy the very basis of art and maim the truth. The possibilities of becoming dress vanish in the violence of contrast between too-large bust, too-small waist, and too-large hips—always the disfiguring marks of the over-corseted figure.

There are many corsets designed to accent the natural charm of every type of figure. Whatever your corset needs there are many models created in accordance with the unchanging principles of beauty and good taste that will assure you graceful lines and proper proportions with that unconsciousness of restraint that can only result from the healthful support of a faultlessly fitted corset.

Our staff is trained by special study to assist you in selecting your proper corset.
